OTHERPROMINENT SPEAKERS COMING

Murray D. Lincoln, secretary of the Ohio farm bureau federation, will be the principal speaker for the annual meeting of the Adams county farm bureau to be held at the court house next Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

Mr. Lincoln is a forceful speaker and has spent years in farm organization work. Under his leadership the Ohio farm bureau has grown from an organization that occupied one small room to an organization owning its own three story building and employing more than three hundred persons. The Ohio farm bureau owns and operates a chain of more than forty feed stores, servicing thousands of Ohio farmers and doing a business of several millions of dollars. It operates the Farm Bureau Mutual automobile insurance company. It has set up a finance corporation that loans money to its members for farm use. It operates a traffic department that annually saves its members thousands of dollars on their freight bills. Its legislative department protects the interests of Ohio farmers and this past year wrote the tax laws passed by the state legislature.

Qualified Speaker

With Mr. Lincoln's broad experience in farm organization work he is exceedingly well qualified to talk on the problems that confront farmers today.

The Adams county farm bureau is working out a program of cooperative marketing of fruit and eggs. On this program it has the cooperation of the Pennsylvania farm bureau federation. Another speaker, Andrew Hanneman, comes from the bureau of markets, state department of agriculture. He will discuss the set up and financing necessary to handle these products. Packing and grading stations, state inspection and brands and other details will be elaborated. This is a subject that should interest large numbers Adams county farmers.

State Heads Coming

A discussion of cooperative buying of supplies and a plan to make this service more widely available to Adams county farmers will be part of the program.

Through its affiliation with the Pennsylvania farm bureau federation and with the American farm bureau federation, the Adams county farm bureau has a place at the council table of these organizations. President Roland N. Benjamin, of the state farm bureau federation, and W. E. Beanblossom, secretary, will be on the program of the meeting. CHINA PUSHES JAPS BACK AS BATTLE RAGES

JAP AIRPLANE IS SHOT DOWN

Shanghai, Saturday, Feb. 6 (AP).—Summing up the results of the past 24 hours of fighting, foreign military observers agreed today that the Chinese holding Chapei had pushed back the Japanese a little, improving their positions slightly.

The furious bombardment with machine guns and heavy artillery went on without interruption early this morning on a front which stretched from the north station in Chapei and scattered along the Whangpo river down to the Woosung forts, 16 miles from town.

Airplanes were playing an important part in the engagement. One Japanese airship bombed a Chinese troop train moving into Chapei, killing an undetermined number of men. One bomb wrecked a steel car, scattering the bodies of Chinese soldiers along the tracks.

The master of a British steamer which came in Friday evening said he had seen a Japanese plane down in the Yangtze river beyond the Woosung forts, the pilot having been badly wounded.

Heavy Bombardment

Shanghai, Feb. 5 (AP)—Shanghai shook to another terrific bombardment of Chapei this afternoon. It was impossible to get a correct survey of conditions because of the smoke from guns and the fires which enveloped the native city.

Simultaneously Japanese planes swooped about the Chinese forts, but after a long bombardment the Chinese were still holding on.

Chinese airplanes took a more important part in today's action than at any time hitherto. One Japanese plane was shot down and the three men in the crew were instantly killed.

The United States army transport Chaumont and seven United States destroyers steamed into Shanghai during the day in the thick of the battle. The American forces now at Shanghai now total almost 6,000 men.

A report from the Japanese naval command to Tokio said the naval forces ashore had suffered nearly ten per cent casualties since the fighting began.

3 STUDENTS ARE ARRESTED

Disturbance In Majestic Theatre, Thursday Afternoon, Leads To Arrest.

Santaniello is charged with assault and battery and resisting arrest, while Renshaw and Brown are charged with interfering with an officer in the performance of his duty.

The trio were released under $300 bail each for a hearing before Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer next Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

The three college students were among a group of about fifty others attending the Thursday matinee at the Majestic theatre. During the show, the students are said to have become boisterous, and Manager Fred E. Walters called on Constable Clare L. Sanders, who was in the theatre, to quiet the students.

Fight In Lobby

Constable Sanders said he mingled with the students and warned them against further disturbance. When the students persisted, the officer said he started to put Santaniello and several of the other students out of the theatre.

The constable said they refused to leave, declaring Sanders was not an officer. The constable said he then showed Santaniello his badge, and started to take the student from the theatre. In doing so, Santaniello tore Constable Sanders' shirt. When the officer and the students reached the lobby of the theatre, Santaniello is alleged to have struck Constable Sanders with his first. Renshaw and Brown are said to have joined in the fracas in the lobby.

3 Are Arrested

Santaniello, Renshaw and Brown, followed by a number of the other students, then left the theatre and started out Carlisle street. Constable Sanders then deputized Charles J. Myers, Chambersburg street, and the two followed the students, overtaking them north of the Western Maryland railroad station.

In the meantime, Manager Wal-

The east felt the sting of winter today. A blizzard swept New England, pounding its coast into high and furious seas, smashing communication lines and delaying traffic.

Mellon Undecided Upon Problem Of Wearing 'Plus Fours' at Court

Washington, Feb. 5.—Andrew W. Mellon met correspondents Thursday in what was probably his last press conference as secretary of the treasury. He will resign within a week and Ogden Mills, undersecretary of the treasury, will succeed him. Before assuming his duties as ambassador to the Court of St. James's, Mr. Mellon will spend some time in the south, probably Florida.

"Will you wear knee breeches at the Court of St. James's?" it was the inevitable question.

"I don't know," he said. "George Harvey did, George Dawes did not. It's a matter of preference after all, isn't it?" he replied.

It might have been expected that the man who reduced the public debt some $10,000,000,000 would want to talk about that accomplishment, but he did not. He was much more interested in the transformation of Pennsylvania avenue from a bedraggled brick Chinatown to a prospective marble thoroughfare of surpassing architectural beauty.

Sought To Escape Post

"You know," he said, "I did not want to take this office. I did not see how I could break away from my business connections. I told President Harding, at Merion, that I thought he could do better and that perhaps I was ineligible. At the time I didn't want to come, neither did I want to refuse. I had no very substantial reason for refusing it.

"Finally I decided that I would have to break away from my business some day and that after four years I would go back again. When I was sworn in, somebody asked me what I considered the most important problem I would have to contend with.

"I said 'the newspapermen.'"

Frequently there was a note of sadness in Mr. Mellon's hesitant voice. An art lover, he has been greatly interested in supervising the great new government building which is transforming the central part of Washington. Mr. Mellon dwelt on the beauties of the capital to come, of the impressive classic buildings completed or rising in the Triangle area, and the monumental structures that will line the great new Constitution avenue from the Mall of the capital down to the new Arlington Bridge.

"It will be magnificent," he said, contemplatively.

HOTEL ANNEX OR GARAGE TO HOUSE DISPLAY

Auto Dealers To Inspect 2 Rooms And Definitely Decide Tonight.

SEEK ROOM FOR ALL EXHIBITORS

Temporary arrangements have been made by the Adams county automobile dealers' association with Henry M. Scharf, manager of the Hotel Gettysburg, to hold the 1932 automobile show in the Hotel Gettysburg annex.

Mr. Scharf and a committee from the association inspected the auditorium, Thursday afternoon, and arrangements were made to remove the uprights between the two swinging doors, in the Carlisle street entrance, in order to permit entry of the machines.

The dealers, at their meeting in the fire engine house Thursday night, definitely rejected the Epley display room on York street "because the cost was prohibitive" and will inspect the auditorium in the Hotel Gettysburg tonight. The dealers said that if they can arrange the space to permit the proper exhibit of machines and accessories they will hold the show in the annex.

Consider Garage

The Plank and Bell garage is also being considered, and the dealers will also inspect this building, and a final decision will be reached tonight. It has been definitely determined to hold a show this year and in all probability the exposition will be held some time in March, at which time more than 25 new models will be on display.

Several buildings were under consideration by the dealers. The National garage annex, the largest room, was not available because of the inability of the dealers to secure outside parking space for the number of machines stored in this garage.

The Epley room on York street was being considered but the dealers rejected this room because they felt they could not afford to pay the rental fee asked.

Man Sought On Bench Warrant Gives Self Up

George Sharrah, Franklin township, sought on a bench warrant issued by Judge Donald P. McPherson for failing to pay the costs assessed against him by a jury in court here last week, surrendered to Deputy Sheriff Blaine E. Bixler at the Adams county jail, Thursday afternoon, and was locked up for the night. He is expected to go before Judge McPherson this afternoon for sentence.

The costs, amounting to $30.61, resulted from the trial of Clinton Davis. Sharrah's son-in-law, charged with assault and battery. The jurors acquitted Davis but divided the costs. Sharrah paid $5 on the cost bill after the trial, but failed to pay the remainder.

3 STUDENTS ARE ARRESTED

Disturbance In Majestic Theatre, Thursday Afternoon, Leads To Arrest.

Santaniello is charged with assault and battery and resisting arrest, while Renshaw and Brown are charged with interfering with an officer in the performance of his duty.

The trio were released under $300 bail each for a hearing before Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer next Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

The three college students were among a group of about fifty others attending the Thursday matinee at the Majestic theatre. During the show, the students are said to have become boisterous, and Manager Fred E. Walters called on Constable Clare L. Sanders, who was in the theatre, to quiet the students.

Fight In Lobby

Constable Sanders said he mingled with the students and warned them against further disturbance. When the students persisted, the officer said he started to put Santaniello and several of the other students out of the theatre.

The constable said they refused to leave, declaring Sanders was not an officer. The constable said he then showed Santaniello his badge, and started to take the student from the theatre. In doing so, Santaniello tore Constable Sanders' shirt. When the officer and the students reached the lobby of the theatre, Santaniello is alleged to have struck Constable Sanders with his first. Renshaw and Brown are said to have joined in the fracas in the lobby.

3 Are Arrested

Santaniello, Renshaw and Brown, followed by a number of the other students, then left the theatre and started out Carlisle street. Constable Sanders then deputized Charles J. Myers, Chambersburg street, and the two followed the students, overtaking them north of the Western Maryland railroad station.

In the meantime, Manager Wal-

Temperature Down With Biting Gale

The temperature dropped sharply, Thursday evening, while a biting gale from the northwest brought snow flurries to Gettysburg and vicinity. Although the wind was blowing almost gale proportions all evening, no major damage was reported. The snow did not last long, however, and melted almost as soon as it fell.

By the A. P.

The east felt the sting of winter today. A blizzard swept New England, pounding its coast into high and furious seas, smashing communication lines and delaying traffic.

STOCK REPORT

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—The stock market was heavy today but trading although somewhat more active than yesterday was still dull. Rails turned reactionary and their drop brought out selling in other sections. There were numerous losses of one to three points.

Mellon Undecided Upon Problem Of Wearing 'Plus Fours' at Court

Washington, Feb. 5.—Andrew W. Mellon met correspondents Thursday in what was probably his last press conference as secretary of the treasury. He will resign within a week and Ogden Mills, undersecretary of the treasury, will succeed him. Before assuming his duties as ambassador to the Court of St. James's, Mr. Mellon will spend some time in the south, probably Florida.

"Will you wear knee breeches at the Court of St. James's?" it was the inevitable question.

"I don't know," he said. "George Harvey did, George Dawes did not. It's a matter of preference after all, isn't it?" he replied.

It might have been expected that the man who reduced the public debt some $10,000,000,000 would want to talk about that accomplishment, but he did not. He was much more interested in the transformation of Pennsylvania avenue from a bedraggled brick Chinatown to a prospective marble thoroughfare of surpassing architectural beauty.

Sought To Escape Post

"You know," he said, "I did not want to take this office. I did not see how I could break away from my business connections. I told President Harding, at Merion, that I thought he could do better and that perhaps I was ineligible. At the time I didn't want to come, neither did I want to refuse. I had no very substantial reason for refusing it.

"Finally I decided that I would have to break away from my business some day and that after four years I would go back again. When I was sworn in, somebody asked me what I considered the most important problem I would have to contend with.

"I said 'the newspapermen.'"

Frequently there was a note of sadness in Mr. Mellon's hesitant voice. An art lover, he has been greatly interested in supervising the great new government building which is transforming the central part of Washington. Mr. Mellon dwelt on the beauties of the capital to come, of the impressive classic buildings completed or rising in the Triangle area, and the monumental structures that will line the great new Constitution avenue from the Mall of the capital down to the new Arlington Bridge.

"It will be magnificent," he said, contemplatively.

HOTEL ANNEX OR GARAGE TO HOUSE DISPLAY

Auto Dealers To Inspect 2 Rooms And Definitely Decide Tonight.

SEEK ROOM FOR ALL EXHIBITORS

Temporary arrangements have been made by the Adams county automobile dealers' association with Henry M. Scharf, manager of the Hotel Gettysburg, to hold the 1932 automobile show in the Hotel Gettysburg annex.

Mr. Scharf and a committee from the association inspected the auditorium, Thursday afternoon, and arrangements were made to remove the uprights between the two swinging doors, in the Carlisle street entrance, in order to permit entry of the machines.

The dealers, at their meeting in the fire engine house Thursday night, definitely rejected the Epley display room on York street "because the cost was prohibitive" and will inspect the auditorium in the Hotel Gettysburg tonight. The dealers said that if they can arrange the space to permit the proper exhibit of machines and accessories they will hold the show in the annex.

Consider Garage

The Plank and Bell garage is also being considered and the dealers will also inspect this building, and a final decision will be reached tonight. It has been definitely determined to hold a show this year and in all probability the exposition will be held some time in March, at which time more than 25 new models will be on display.

Several buildings were under consideration by the dealers. The National garage annex, the largest room, was not available because of the inability of the dealers to secure outside parking space for the number of machines stored in this garage.

The Epley room on York street was being considered but the dealers rejected this room because they felt they could not afford to pay the rental fee asked.

Lent begins February 10 and ends with Easter on March 27.

Man Sought On Bench Warrant Gives Self Up

George Sharrah, Franklin township, sought on a bench warrant issued by Judge Donald P. McPherson for failing to pay the costs assessed against him by a jury in court here last week, surrendered to Deputy Sheriff Blaine E. Bixler at the Adams county jail, Thursday afternoon, and was locked up for the night. He is expected to go before Judge McPherson this afternoon for sentence.

The costs, amounting to $30.61, resulted from the trial of Clinton Davis, Sharrah's son-in-law, charged with assault and battery. The jurors acquitted Davis but divided the costs. Sharrah paid $5 on the cost bill after the trial, but failed to pay the remainder.

SIGNIFICANT EXPERIENCE

When we become satisfied, the little wisdom we own passes into other hands. Potentially we are either fools or masters. Significant experience places the picture of what we are where all may see, and accurately judge.

The flow of life through us cleanses, enlarges—or withers us!

People are made dominant by experience or else it crushes them and merely makes pavement of them over which triumphant souls pass in deep thought.

The really great mind always remains cosmic, plastic, and alert. Such a mind is forever inviting experience. But not that sort of experience that absorbs the substance of the soul! Only significant experience counts.

Everything we think and everything that we do is influenced and colored by some manner of experience. It may become our slave or master, our devil or angel!

Experience is something like the air we breathe. We take it in, and then send it out—after it has changed us, or given us nourishment, or after it has helped to furnish life for us. None of us can be efficient and useful without some significant experience. It backgrounds all that we do, or even think.

Experience often exacts a heavy penalty. Sometimes, oftenest perhaps, we pay it—but there are times when our experience is charged to many a one outside ourselves. Like old debts left to those who were not responsible for them.

With our lives blanket with rich robes of experience, however, we are enabled to meet the world, and all that it holds, on equal terms with the most favored, for experience always has to be earned. It is never given away. And you can't get it by reading about it. It has to be yours, like the clothes you wear! Then it becomes a part of you.

No experience is ever exactly the same. This, in itself, is significant! An idea to spur us on, to arouse the most latent forces within us, so that through experience, they may become fully clothed and made to do useful service in the world.

BULLET CAGERS ON 2-DAY JAUNT

Meet Princeton Tonight And Drexel Friday Night On Foreign Courts.

Coach Bream's Orange and Blue Bullet dribblers, who left today for a two-day jaunt into foreign lands for two court engagements, may lose one clash but must win the other if they desire to retain undisputed claim to the lead in the Central Pennsylvania Collegiate Basketball league standing.

The Bullets engage Princeton at Princeton tonight and then double back to Philadelphia for their second battle with Drexel Friday night. The Princeton game has no bearing on the league standing, the New Jersey quintet not being a member of the league. But Drexel, nursing sixth place in the league, is anxious to get back into the running and is determined to upset the Gettysburgians.

If Gettysburg loses the Drexel tilt it will be tied with Franklin and Marshall for first place and Drexel will move into a tie with Ursinus and Albright for third place.

A cold does 3 things
"Pape's" stops them all

A cold always affects you in at least three ways. Air passages are inflamed and irritated. Perspiration is checked. Bowels are clogged with acid wastes from the mucous discharge. So doctors say you must do three things to be rid of a cold.

Pape's Cold Compound does all three! It reduces inflammation and swelling of the mucous membrane; it induces perspiration; opens the bowels. Chew one of these pleasant tablets and see how quickly nasal discharge stops; head clears; breathing becomes easy. See how that achy, feverish, weak feeling disappears. And "Pape's" doesn't stop with killing cold germs. It activates bowels and removes germs and acid wastes from the system. All drug stores—35c. Just remember "Pape's".

Autos Side-swipe; Occupants Injured

Two victims of an automobile crash that occurred late Tuesday night on the Baltimore road between Taneytown and Emmitsburg are improving satisfactorily.

The accident was the result of two cars side-swiping, one a hired machine owned by Joseph Rosensteel, of Emmitsburg, and occupied by John Orumlish and Francis Sanders, both of Emmitsburg, and the other a light machine driven by Carol Koontz, of Taneytown. The Rosensteel car was approaching Emmitsburg while the other machine was going toward Taneytown. The fronts of the cars were demolished.

A companion of Koontz was removed to the hospital at the time. Sanders was badly bruised about the head and after treatment was taken to his home.

The narrow road and unfavorable weather conditions were given as the causes of the accident.

RUTH JUDD IS DECLARED SANE

Reveal Love And Jealousy Over Friend Of Trunk Murder Victims.

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 5 (AP).—Quarrels over men and the purported "strange intimacies" between Agnes Anne LeRoi and Hedvig Samuelson, trunk-murder victims, broke up the friendship between the two young women and Winnie Ruth Judd, who is on trial for the slayings, it was testified Thursday.

Dr. Joseph Catton, San Francisco psychiatrist, related to the jury conversations which he said he had with the defendant concerning her relations with the victims prior to the killings last October 16. He declared Mrs. Judd to be sane.

Mrs. Judd, the witness said, named Jack Halloran, Phoenix lumber dealer and sportsman, as a man "I love with all my heart and soul more passionately than I ever loved my husband."

Halloran, who volunteered himself as a witness, was sworn at the start of the trial with the rest of the state witnesses, but has not been called.

"Would there have been any Ruth Judd case without Halloran?" Doctor Catton said he asked Mrs. Judd.

"No," he said she answered.

"Could Halloran help you if he wanted to?" He said her answer was: "He certainly could."

Mrs. Judd, who is being tried for the slaying of Mrs. LeRoi, also was declared sane by Dr. J. R. Mauldin, Maricopa county physician. Defense witnesses previously had testified they believed Mrs. Judd was insane at the time of the slayings.

New Books

By Ware Torrey

New York.—In contrast to the "debunking" biographies of George Washington that have appeared recently, Louis Martin Sears of Purdue university has written a scholarly and fair-minded appaisal of the first president.

In "George Washington," Professor Sears studies the character of his subject from perspectives of Washington's writing, speech and actions. The book is thoroughly documented and illustrated with an unusual series of maps.

Sears believes that "it was the character of Washington which assured success to the American Revolution." Since he also holds the belief that Washington, above all others, "has left the imprint of his life upon the country he created," Professor Sears' calm and convincing analysis finds immediate application.

Defending Harding

Another phase of American history and biography is taken up in Harry M. Daugherty's defense of himself and Harding, "The Inside Story of the Harding Tagedy." This latest inside story should provoke as much comment pro and con as have other books on the subject.

Novels of the week include "The Phoenix-Kind," by Peter Quennell, a delicately written story of two brothers; "Imagined Corners," by Willa Muir, which tells an absorbing story and deals deft character analysis of its progress; Warwick Deeping's "The Prophetic Marriage," for the first time published in America, the careful study of the development of a sensitive young man, and a canvas-full of ruddy, vital people gathered together by Jacob Wassermann in "Doctor Kerkhoven."

Echo From The War

The point of view of air raiders is graphically given in "Zeppelins Over England," by Capt. Treusch Von Buttlar Brandenfels, who was in command of the first German zeppelin to cross the English coast and who took part in many attacks on England during the war.

William Polmer, a young author in whom Hugh Walpole has detected signs of "unmistakable genius," turns his attention to a conflict of racial psychology in "They Never Come Back" and achieves a story which remains entertaining even when it borders on the bizarre.

The point of view of the Englishman resident in Japan is presented through a young English artist, an English girl who is married to a Japanese, and a Japanese youth whose deep affection for the artist comes to grief because of the conflict of eastern and western temperament.

ters called for Officer John H. Keller and he followed Constable Sanders and Myers. The officers and Myers then took the three alleged offenders before Justice of the Peace Shealer.

S. S. Neely, Gettysburg attorney-at-law, was summoned by the students to defend them, and District Attorney John P. Butt also was called in. The district attorney said he would press the charges in an effort to break up disturbances by students in the theatre.

THREE ARE SHOT IN WASHINGTON

Two Girls And A Man Are Mysteriously Shot In Capital.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Two girls were shot down Thursday night from an automobile on a street in Takoma park, Northwest Washington suburb, and shortly afterward a man was shot on a street a few miles nearer the city proper.

A woman witness to the shooting of the girls said they were walking along the street when a large black sedan approached them. It slowed down and a serjes of shots were fired, felling both girls. Those who heard the shots said they were close together as though fired from a machine gun.

Man Shot In Back

Gordon T. Backus, employe of the department of agriculture, was walking toward his home when a black sedan drove up behind him and one shot was fired, striking him in the back. He crawled half a block to a neighbor's home and was taken to a hospital.

Bore Maryland Tags

The license number of the car from which the shots were fired at the girls was not obtained. Backus said the one from which he was shot bore a Maryland tag.

Can Use Defense Measures While Defending Life

Norristown, Feb. 5 (AP)—Counsel for Edward Allen, charged with the murder of Francis A. Donaldson III, told the jury in Allen's trial today that 'it is the right of any individual in defense of his life to take the defensive measures necessary for that purpose."

So declared William T. Connor, counsel for Allen, who killed Donaldson with a shotgun in the Allen apartment last November.

The prosecution concluded its case shortly before noon and the defense was begun immediately.

Rose Allen, whose betrayal by Donaldson has been spread upon the court records, sat all alone today and kept her eyes mostly on the floor.

17 KILLED IN SHIP BLAST

One Man Is Missing; Believe He May Have Jumped Overboard.

Philadelphia, Feb. 5.—The death toll from the explosions and fire which wrecked the oil tanker Bidwell at its dock in Marcus Hook early Thursday mounted to seventeen after a searching party was able to penetrate the twisted mass of steel. One man is still missing and a woman and three men were seriously injured.

The bodies of twelve men, charred and mangled so badly that identification was difficult, were taken from the upper deck of the ill-fated tanker, and five were found in other parts of the ship.

The missing man is believed to have been trapped in the hold of the charred ship or to have drowned when he was hurled or leaped overboard to escape the inferno which followed the explosion.

There were four distinct blasts, and almost immediately the blackness of the night was illuminated by fingers of flame that enveloped the Bidwell and shot high into the air

The countryside for miles around the pier at the foot of Market street, where the vessel, owned by the Sun oil company and chartered to the Sinclair oil company, had pumped out its cargo of crude oil Wednesday afternoon, was shaken by the terrific explosions.

Cause of Disaster Sought

The detonations came while shore workmen, augmenting the crew of thirty-five, were cleaning the holds. The cause has not been officially determined, but some surviving members of the crew expressed the belief a spark of flame came in contact with a gas pocket. Coroner Scheeble, of Delaware county, and officials of the Sun oil company questioned the members of the crew in an effort to learn the cause of the disaster.

Rural Carriers To Meet In Hanover

A joint meeting of the rural letter cariers' association of Adams and York counties will be held at Hanover in April, according to plans made by the York county association. Congressman Harry L. New Jersey Governor Indorses Hoover Request to End Hoarding

Trenton, Feb. 5—President Hoover's request to cease hoarding of money was approved by Governor Moore, who has received numerous letters from bankers urging that all money be placed in circulation.

"People should remove their money immediately from safe-deposit boxes, under beds, in clocks and other similar places of concealment," said the governor.

As a preliminary to an introduction of bills designed to effect economies in New Jersey state government by abolishing useless or needless commissions, the governor requested Attorney General Stevens to prepare a detailed list of all commissions in the state.

As a part of his economy program the governor has recommended that such bodies be abolished.

Colonel Thomas E. Fitzsimmons, judge advocate of the forty-fourth division, urged upon Governor Moore an amendment to the constitution to provide that line officers of military units, which include captains and lieutenants, be appointed by the governor instead of election by the enlisted personnel. The proposal has the approval of General Quincy A. Gillmore and has no political significance, it was said.

Among the agencies listed for discard are the state traffic commission, the commission to mark historic sites, South Jersey Transit commission, tax survey commission, state regional planning commission, commission on migratory children, small loans commission, New Jersey real estate commission, migrant welfare commission, commission on old age and insurance pensions and the state board of regents.

Governor Moore proposes that the functions of those commissions doing a necessary work shall be transferred to some established department with a consequent saving of appropriations.

BULLETS LOSE TO PRINCETON

Meet Drexel Quint In League Encounter At Philadelphia Tonight.

Gettysburg college's Bullet dribblers lost its second tilt of the 1932 campaign, Thursday night, when they bowed before the fast stepping Princeton quintet, on the latter's court, 46 to 32. It was the second defeat in six starts for the Men-of-Bream, but the defeat has no bearing on the Central Pennsylvania Collegiate basketball standing. Princeton is not a member of the league.

Siebert was high scorer of the evening with fourteen points. Captain Seely and Dracha were tied for scoring honors for the Bullets, each registering nine tallies.

Tonight the Bullets face the Drexel aggregation in their second and last clash this season at Philadelphia. If the Bullets lose tonight's tilt they will be tied for first place standing in the league with Franklin and Marshall A victory tonight will give the Orange and Blue defenders a whacking good lead of four victories and no defeats.

Next Wednesday Dickinson comes here for the first of a two-game series with the Bullets.

PHOENIXVILLE HERE SATURDAY

"Skeets" Anglemoyer, Former G-burg Star, On Visiting Team Quintet.

A fast game is promised Saturday night when the Fleet-Wing quintet plays a return game with the Phoenixville Pros on the hotel floor. The Wings eked out a narrow 47-42 win over this club last Wednesday but expect stiffer opposition in the coming game.

Phoenixville is reported to be enlisting several new players to bolster their lineup and are confident of victory.

Prominent in the visitors' lineup are "Skeets" Anglemoyer, guard on the college team last year, and "Lefty" Magyar, one-armed star of Phoenixville. With a revamped lineup the Pros are expected to give the locals considerable trouble.

Highway vs. York Springs

As a preliminary the state highway quintet will play the strong York Springs independents. This game will get under way at 7 o'clock.

Hoak's Dairy five, who earlier in the season refused to meet the Wings, claiming they were "not good enough," will be played here Monday night.

Statistics reval that in winning twelve of their fifteen games, the locals have rolled up a total of 539 points for an average of 35.9 points per game. The opposition has tallied 406 points, averaging 27.1 tallies a game.

21 Are Missing In Ship Collision

Boston, Feb. 5 (AP)—Six members of the crew of the schooner Eleanor Nickerson were picked up by the steamer Jean Jadot and 21 were missing after a collision 350 miles west of Halifax, the coast guard reported today.

The Jadot sent word that she had been in collision with the Nickerson and after picking up the six men it was searching for the 21 others.

Countians Oppose Sino-Jap War Aid

Congressman Harry L. Haines of the York-Adams district has been sent a communication signed by the two pastors and more than two hundred members of the Reformed and Trinity Lutheran churches at Arendtsville suggesting a national policy with reference to the Chinese-Japanese outbreak.

The document declares "War is the enemy of all that is good and therefore contrary to the will of God."

It is recommended that all loans to Japan be prohibited and if it is not established that Japan is the aggressor in the trouble that loans to China be stopped also; that an embargo be placed on all materials of war; that an economic embargo be instituted as soon as practicable; that citizens of the United States leave the war-stricken area, thereby removing a great cause of interference on the part of our military forces.

The name of the Rev. Ernest W. Brindle heads the signers of the Reformed congregation and that of the Rev. George B. Ely the signers of the Lutheran congregation.

BOY CRAZY

by Grace Perkins

SYNOPSIS: A runaway marriage—at seventeen—is the crest of Hope Ross' whirlwind social seasons. She has been the envied young leader of the Westchester boys and girls; now she is married to Dickey Dale, who is still in Harmouth. The suddenness of the wedding is a result of the hostile attitude that Hope's father and mother have held toward Dickey. Even her sister, Goody, has disapproved. Hope has been told to forbid him the house, and a series of electric situations have driven Dickey to rebellion. He tells Hope that she must decide whether she will stick to him. She marries him in proof of her love and loyalty. Now the problem is, how to break the news to Hope's family. Her father feels that Dickey is socially inferior, and objects to Dickey's father, a theatrical manager. All of Hope's life Ross has spoiled her; now he expects that she will obey him and break with Dickey.

Chapter 12

CRACKERS AND A KITTEN

Dickey's face went blank. Then he rose manfully to the practicalities of life.

"All right," he agreed slowly. "If you think you ought. If you really must. Only promise me, Hope—he can't talk you into coming home. We're married now!"

Her blue eyes studied him and weighed his words.

"It says to leave your mother and father and all kin," he explained magnificently. "Leave all, and follow your husband."

"You mean," said Hope carefully, "that you're not going to take me home?"

"Why, Hope?"

She shivered slightly at his exploded reproof, and drew her velvet wrap, with its white fur collar, tighter about her.

"Who ever heard of going home right after being married?" insisted Dickey in an injured tone. "You leave home right after you're married. Everyone knows that."

"Well, where are we going?" inquired Hope in a timid voice.

"To a hotel, of course. We'll call your father from there. I don't mind telling him we're married. That's all right by me. I want to do the right thing—though I don't intend to call old Hickey until the morning. Morning's time enough. But your father and mother don't approve of me. And I don't want any interference. Understand? You've chosen me now, baby, and you're going to stick by me, aren't you?"

She gazed at him, her heart swelling with tenderness.

"Forever and ever," she said simply. And who would ever have imagined Hope so tractable? Was it possible that Hope had met the man who could manage her?

Dickey, after a rewarding kiss for this last statement, was busy fishing in his pockets. From one after another he hauled out cash. Dollars and cents.

"Fourteen dollars and sixty-nine cents," he announced after poking over the silver wih a probing finger. "Well, I guess we can get by for tonight. After tonight things will be okay, baby. Hickey will do the right thing. First off, tomorrow morning I'm going to get you the swellest ring you ever saw. That old signet ring of mine is just a makeshift, you know."

Hope felt the bulging old signet ring with her small cold fingers.

"I like it," she decided with a queer little smile. "I love that old signet ring. It's my wedding ring."

"Shucks," grinned Dickey. "Suppose I'm going to let you wear something your crowd will laugh at? Say I didn't have enough to buy you a decent ring? I haven't got enough. But I'll get it. I can pay old Hickey back. I won't go to college any more. I guess I'll get a job right in Hickey's office. Or maybe I'll write plays."

"Oh, please write a play," Hope pleaded gleefully. "They make lots of money, Dickey."

She shivered again, and Dickey started the car with a sudden spurt of activity.

"Where are we going?" she called to him against the wind.

"To the hotel here," he answered, drawing her closer and cruising quietly up the streets of the town.

But first they found a tiny drygoods store open, and purchased some necessities, with their thoughts on the fourteen dollars that had to go so far. Fourteen dollars for a honeymoon, giggled Hope. Wasn't it romantic? Fourteen dolairs, reddened Dickey, but of course, that was only until morning. They could get by.

They made a few more purchases. A pack of cigarettes and two boxes of crackers. A bottle of milk and several chocolate bars. Because after all, it was nearly three in the morning, and many hours since they had eaten. On their money it would be impossible for them to order a snack in the hotel, so it was best to bring in a few nibbles instead. What a wedding feast!

Then they started off. One-arm driving may be against the law but what are statutes on a wedding night? Speeding may be indulged in by crazy, giddy, headlong people; but married couples quite naturally ride slowly, dreamily, going past the right turns, and becoming quite absurdly lost!

Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Hickson Dale!

"Oh, lookee!" breathed Hope suddenly as they rolled by a shadowed moonlit lawn. "Look—what's in there?"

Dickey obediently looked, his foot forgetting the gas pedal. The chugging little roadster stalled. And man and wife laughed, thoroughly amused.

"Look," repeated Hope softly, a white gloved finger pointing stubbily, contrary to Mama and Mrs. Post. "It's a kennel, I do declare. And dogs inside. Oh, the cute little things! No, it's cats. Dickey—it's cats!"

Dickey peered through the moonlight.

"Yeh," he agreed soulfully. "A white cat."

"That's good luck," Hope squeezed his arm unmercifully. "Oh, the sweet. Let's go look at it, Dickey. Let's go tell it we're married."

Forthwith, they opened the door of the car and then headed, hand in hand, across the damp and sweet-smelling lawn toward the white cat that ought to be told of the wedding.

Down went Hope, kneeling in the moonlight, crooning and clucking softly to the superior and unconcerned animal.

"Tell you what," Dickey decided impulsively. "I'm going to buy you that cat, Hope. As my wedding present."

"Oh, Dickey—could you? How could you? Oh, you darling! I'd love it."

"Sure. Just as a starter. Course, there'll be other wedding presents on cricket. I can't give you diamonds and those things. Hickey might. But I'm not going to accept more from Hickey than I have to. Understand? I'm going to do the supporting. I'm going to take care of you. Some day, when I'm successful, Hope, I'll buy you gorgeous, beautiful things, and take you traveling everywhere and show you off to the world. . . ."

"But Dickey—could you get me the pussy now? I'd just love it!"

Dickey retorted with a handsome shake of his head and a swift brace of his shoulders.

"You wait," he said. And marched off to the house.

Hope, standing now, gazed from Dickey's progress toward the darkened and sleeping house, back to the white kitty that mewed soulfully through the wire caging. Suddenly she flung out her arms and looked up at the moon. May moon. Lover's moon.

People seldom realize about young men's fancies. The woman, wrapped in a shawl over her blanket bathrobe, who eventually snapped on her lights and opened her front door a crack to peer at Dickey, had tart ideas about yong men's fancies.

She spoke a piece of her mind. And shut the door in Dickey's face.

But Dickey, dauntless, rang her bell again. Over and over he rang it, standing sturdily in front of the blank stretch of the old oaken doorway.

The old woman swung open the door once more. Now, one could see her crinkled curl papers, and even from where Hope stood, one could hear her shrill voice talking wildly about police and people that disturbed others' peace. . . .

One could see Dickey jam his foot inside the doorway. One could see Dickey enter inch by inch, until the door closed behind, and Dickey was inside with the beshawled old lady.

Long Hope waited. Crouched beside the white kitty, who seemed to understand and who purred sublimely. The big white cat turned to haul forth a white feline infant between its motherly teeth.

Oozy, ineffectual tears came to Hope's eyes. At the sight of the white furred baby, she forgot completely how long Dickey was being closeted in the big wooden house with the irate woman in curl-papers, and forgot conveniently how necessary it was to phone Papa Ross.

Eventually Dickey returned. With the woman beside him, beaming now in spite of her grumbles: a huge man's coat drawn over her shawl and her blanket bathrobe.

Dickey explained. One could not buy the big white cat, because such an animal was worth one hundred and forty dollars; and one had only nine dollars and twenty cents in one's pocket!

Hollywood Sights & Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood — Burly, red-headed Charlie Bickford's newest ace-in-the-hole for independence is a woman's lingerie shop. He thinks it will make money, and you can quip him about it all you please.

Independence is the watchword, the creed almost, of this strapping, frank-speaking Irish rebel, who is the movie colony's most versatile business man.

Besides the lingerie emporium, there's a filling station or two, a restaurant, a hog farm—well, there are half a dozen or so ventures owned solely by him.

That whaling ship deserves special mention, for "from whaling to lingerie," as Charlie suggests, isn't a bad movie title. And sometime soon Bickford plans to enter the movies as producer as well as actor. He will, of course, be an "independent" in this project too.

Independent Fellow.

Even when he was on the stage, in stock, Bickford's independence was carefully preserved. If he couldn't get what he wanted on the stage, he left the stage and got some other job until the stage came to his terms.

Now he spends a lot of his time dodging contract offers from the studios. He had a contract once, when he first came to Hollywood three years ago, and it cured him permanently. Incidentally it was his troubles then that gave him the reputation of being a rather unmanageable cuss. (His manager says he isn't.)

He fought with the studio over the roles he was given. When he finally got out of the contract, he quit fighting. When he is asked to play a part, he simply insists on seeing the script. If he likes it, he plays it. If he doesn't like it—well, there's no argument, no hard feelings

Plenty of Parts

If the parts didn't come, his various businesses would forestall the necessity of compromising on his stand. But the parts have come his way faster than he can handle them.

So Charlie Bickford, actor and business man, is sitting on top of the Hollywood world, doing as he pleases, saying what to call spades. But when he's working on a picture he likes—and nowadays he works on no others—his reputation as a rebel doesn't hold up.

That nickname of "Bad Boy" Bickford was given him when he was standing up and telling his studio bosses, in the contract days, how and where to get off.

Under his present free-lancing arrangements he is no longer a "bad boy"—rather he's a prize pupil.

About New York

By William Gaines

New York—Countess Olga Albini, the songbird, is one of the few women who ever turned down a fat offer from Florenz Ziegfeld to appear in one of his shows.

Plumpness, on the countess' part, had something to do with her refusal. Ziegfeld wanted her to take off some poundage. The countess, like so many Spanish ladies, likes to eat. Then, too, she had plenty of radio work, and was assured of a steady job on the air.

While a trifle plump, the soprano has yet to lose her graceful proportions. There are persons who consider her the outstanding beauty in the radio field.

Though she loves sweets, she says she does not eat them on days when she is to sing. And she exercises, too; walks for an hour daily, swims all year—in indoor pools when the weather's cold, and fences.

She has acquired an ability for showing off good looking clothes, which she designs herself. It is recalled by some, however, that she was not always so much concerned with her personal appearance, and that her attractiveness has developed with her reputation.

She is proficient at preparing Spanish dishes, and is fond of the tasty food she cooks. She won't wear diamonds, and prefers emeralds. Despite her Spanish blood, she dislikes bright colors. There's not a red frock in her wardrobe. She speaks four languages and has never bobbed her hair. Her manner is gracious.

Dollars And Nonsense

Babe Ruth probably is able to stand a salary slice without having to give up his 12-room apartment, but maybe Mrs. Ruth would have to worry along with just two servants instead of three.

Lou Holtz, the vaudevillian, is another whose salary greivances, however just they may be, fail to stir many sympathetic tears these days.

If Holtz drew even what the Palance wants to pay him for as many weeks per year as the Babe plays ball, his income would shame the diamond star's. Yet Lou is always bothered about a few hundred dollars, more or less.

But maybe it's psychologically good for us to hear that some of the boys are able to stand up and talk back about lucre, regardless of the old bread line bogey.

Itinerant Items

Did you know that the officially defined metropolitan area of New York includes 1,159.84 square miles of New Jersey and only 49.37 square miles more than that of New York state? It also takes in a hunk of Connecticut.

Jim Londos, the wrestler, is patron saint of the Greek-American Athletic club, in the basement of a church. I get there occasionally to get a line on a boxer, whose career I am following with interest.

The place is most orderly and quiet, save for the grunts of mat behemoths. But a visitor knows instinctively that one word of criticism of Londos would throw those quarters into tumult.

GOLF

By O. B. Keeler

As usual, and for my personal part a bit more than usual, we are going to be looking hard at Gene Sarazen as the major tournament season nears. The stocky Italian has served notice again, at Agua Caliente.

Gene didn't win the biggest money tournament this time. He finished as runner-up to Fred Morrison, of Culver City, California, a 31-year-old professional playing his first big money tournament.

Fred, it appears, went crazy in the third round, after a milder attack of golfing mania in the opening session, and with cards of 69-74-68 he was in so comfortable a position that a neat 73, a stroke above par, in the last round let him out with a total of 284.

This, mind you, is four strokes better than par on a fairly tough golf course 6,838 yards around, part of the tournament (the part in which Freddy committed the 69) being played in the rain.

But consider Gene Sarazen's performance, in the light of these eccentricities of course and climate.

Gene Cleans Up

Gene led off in the rain with a 70. The rest of his cards may be read in any order you choose, because they were 72-72-72. Just good, substantial par; that's all.

Gene's ups and down, year in and year out, are drawing nearer to the deadly level of Old Man Par. He is working steadily and intelligently with his game. My tip is to watch him this year, at home and in Britain.

Gene has done very well at Caliente. In three years he has won $10,000 and $500 and $2,500, which is just $13 000 in three starts.

Nobody else ever won as much money in any three golf tournaments in this world.

Leo Diegel, home professional at Caliente, once more exemplified the odd difficulty a local professional has in winning on his own course, where, according to popular fancy, he should have a great advantage—knowing every blade of grass by its first name, and such.

Leo started out as if he meant to do this very thing. But from opening rounds of 70 and 68 he fell away to a 78 and a 76, and his score of 292 was good only for seventh place.

This score would have won the same tournament last year, with the light ball, when John Golden and George Von Elm tied for first place with 293. This time seven players went better than that pace, and the winner beat it by nine large strokes.

Cinch For Pros

But it isn't all in the .07 of an ounce added to the ball The soggy weather caused the tournament officials to make ground rules allowing the placing of the ball in the fairways.

When you give first rate pros a cocked-up lie for a second shot to the green on a long hole, and a wet, heavy green at which to shoot—well, it's just too bad for the old course. The putting surfaces, too were greatly improved over last year.

The newest new ball seems to be gaining in favor. In the south young Charlie Yates, state and city champion of Georgia and Atlanta—the only golfer who ever won both titles in one season—was well sold on the 1931 model, with which he had done pretty well.

The other day, however, Charlie completed his fifth consecutive round at East Lake, ranging from 67 on the old course to 72 on the new, with a total score averaging two strokes better than par for each round.

"Looks to me like a very good ball," said Charles, speaking of the 1932 model.

Plasmochin is a new malaria remedy.

"Choosey" People like the way they TASTE . .

IT'S just what you'd expect. People who enjoy the good things of life . . . are constantly looking for something better to eat and drink . . . and smoke. Something that's out of the ordinary.

In cigarettes this better taste can come only from finer ingredients. Chesterfields are more satisfying to the cultivated palate . . . because there's never any attempt to skimp on Turkish leaf.

These more expensive . . . more richly flavored Turkish tobaccos are added with a generous hand . . . and 'choosey' people . . . everywhere . . . like the result.

In fact Chesterfield's new way of mingling tobacco flavors and aromas is really equivalent to creating an entirely new kind of tobacco . . . one that combines the best qualities of Turkish and fine Domestic leaf.

Perhaps you've noticed that the paper in Chesterfields is whiter . . . purer. Thousands of dollars were spent on research to perfect this paper. It burns without any taste or odor of its own. A detail, of course. But it adds immeasurably to your enjoyment.

Smoke Chesterfields whenever you like . . . They're mild and pure. They'll never tire you as an over-sweetened cigarette might easily do. Day in . . . day out . . . Chesterfields taste right. Light up and see for yourself. They satisfy!

I can pay old Hickey back. I won't go to college any more. I guess I'll get a job right in Hickey's office. Or maybe I'll write plays."

"Oh, please write a play," Hope pleaded gleefully. "They make lots of money, Dickey."

She shivered again, and Dickey started the car with a sudden spurt of activity.

"Where are we going?" she called to him against the wind.

"To the hotel here," he answered, drawing her closer and cruising quietly up the streets of the town.

But first they found a tiny drygoods store open, and purchased some necessities, with their thoughts on the fourteen dollars that had to go so far. Fourteen dollars for a honeymoon, giggled Hope. Wasn't it romantic? Fourteen dolalrs, reddened Dickey, but of course, that was only until morning. They could get by.

They made a few more purchases. A pack of cigarettes and two boxes of crackers. A bottle of milk and several chocolate bars. Because after all, it was nearly three in the morning, and many hours since they had eaten. On their money it would be impossible for them to order a snack in the hotel, so it was best to bring in a few nibbles instead. What a wedding feast!

Then they started off. One-arm driving may be against the law but what are statutes on a wedding night? Speeding may be indulged in by crazy, giddy, headlong people; but married couples quite naturally ride slowly, dreamily, going past the right turns, and becoming quite absurdly lost!

Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Hickson Dale!

"Oh, lookee!" breathed Hope suddenly as they rolled by a shadowed moonlit lawn. "Look—what's in there?"

Dickey obediently looked, his foot forgetting the gas pedal. The chugging little roadster stalled. And man and wife laughed, thoroughly amused.

"Look," repeated Hope softly, a white gloved finger pointing stubbily, contrary to Mama and Mrs. Post. "It's a kennel, I do declare. And dogs inside. Oh, the cute little things! No, it's cats. Dickey—it's cats!"

Dickey peered through the moonlight.

"Yeh," he agreed soulfully. "A white cat."

"That's good luck," Hope squeezed his arm unmercifully. "Oh, the sweet. Let's go look at it, Dickey. Let's go tell it we're married."

Forthwith, they opened the door of the car and then headed, hand in hand, across the damp and sweet-smelling lawn toward the white cat that ought to be told of the wedding.

Down went Hope, kneeling in the moonlight, crooning and clucking softly to the superior and unconcerned animal.

"Tell you what," Dickey decided impulsively. "I'm going to buy you that cat, Hope. As my wedding present."

"Oh, Dickey—could you? How could you? Oh, you darling! I'd love it."

"Sure. Just as a starter. Course, there'll be other wedding presents cricket. I can't give you diamonds and those things. Hickey might. But I'm not going to accept more from Hickey than I have to. Understand? I'm going to do the supporting. I'm going to take care of you. Some day when I'm successful, Hope, I'll buy you gorgeous, beautiful things, and take you traveling everywhere and show you off to the world. . . ."

"But Dickey—could you get me the pussy now? I'd just love it!"

Dickey retorted with a handsome shake of his head and a swift brace of his shoulders.

"You wait," he said. And marched off to the hcuse.

Hope, standing now, gazed from Dickey's progress toward the darkened and sleeping house, back to the white kitty that mewed soulfully through the wire caging. Suddenly she flung out her arms and looked up at the moon. May moon. Lover's moon.

People seldom realize about young men's fancies. The woman, wrapped in a shawl over her blanket bathrobe, who eventually snapped on her lights and opened her front door a crack to peer at Dickey, had tart ideas about yong men's fancies.

She spoke a piece of her mind. And shut the door in Dickey's face.

But Dickey, dauntless, rang her bell again. Over and over he rang it, standing sturdily in front of the blank stretch of the old oaken doorway.

The old woman swung open the door once more. Now, one could see her crinkled curl papers, and even from where Hope stood, one could hear her shrill voice talking wildly about police and people that disturbed others' peace. . . .

One could see Dickey jam his foot inside the doorway. One could see Dickey enter inch by inch, until the door closed behind, and Dickey was inside with the beshawled old lady.

Long Hope waited. Crouched beside the white kitty, who seemed to understand and who purred sublimely. The big white cat turned to haul forth a white feline infant between its motherly teeth.

Oozy, ineffectual tears came to Hope's eyes. At the sight of the white furred baby, she forgot completely how long Dickey was being closeted in the big wooden house with the irate woman in curl-papers, and forgot conveniently how necessary it was to phone Papa Ross.

Eventually Dickey returned. With the woman beside him, beaming now in spite of her grumbles: a huge man's coat drawn over her shawl and her blanket bathrobe.

Dickey explained. One could not buy the big white cat, because such an animal was worth one hundred and forty dollars; and one had only nine dollars and twenty cents in one's pocket!

Hollywood Sights & Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood — Burly, red-headed Charlie Bickford's newest ace-in-the-hole for independence is a woman's lingerie shop. He thinks it will make money, and you can quip him about it all you please.

Independence is the watchword, the creed almost, of this strapping, frank-speaking Irish rebel, who is the movie colony's most versatile business man.

Besides the lingerie emporium, there's a filling station or two, a restaurant, a hog farm—well, there are half a dozen or so ventures owned solely by him.

That whaling ship deserves special mention, for "from whaling to lingerie," as Charlie suggests, isn't a bad movie title. And sometime soon Bickford plans to enter the movies as producer as well as actor. He will, of course, be an "independent" in this project too.

Independent Fellow

Even when he was on the stage, in stock, Bickford's independence was carefully preserved. If he couldn't get what he wanted on the stage, he left the stage and got some other job until the stage came to his terms.

Now he spends a lot of his time dodging contract offers from the studios. He had a contract once, when he first came to Hollywood three years ago, and it cured him permanently. Incidentally it was his troubles then that gave him the reputation of being a rather unmanageable cuss. (His manager says he isn't.)

He fought with the studio over the roles he was given. When he finally got out of the contract, he quit fighting. When he is asked to play a part, he simply insists on seeing the script. If he likes it, he plays it. If he doesn't like it—well, there's no argument, no hard feelings.

Plenty of Parts

If the parts didn't come, his various businesses would forestall the necessity of compromising on his stand. But the parts have come his way faster than he can handle them.

So Charlie Bickford, actor and business man, is sitting on top of the Hollywood world, doing as he pleases, saying what to call spades. But when he's working on a picture he likes—and nowadays he works on no others—his reputation as a rebel doesn't hold up.

That nickname of "Bad Boy" Bickford was given him when he was standing up and telling his studio bosses, in the contract days, how and where to get off.

Under his present free-lancing arrangements he is no longer a "bad boy"—rather he's a prize pupil.

About New York

By William Gaines

New York—Countess Olga Albini, the songbird, is one of the few women who ever turned down a fat offer from Florenz Ziegfeld to appear in one of his shows.

Plumpness on the countess' part, had something to do with her refusal. Ziegfeld wanted her to take off some poundage. The countess, like so many Spanish ladies, likes to eat. Then, too, she had plenty of radio work, and was assured of a steady job on the air.

While a trifle plump, the soprano has yet to lose her graceful proportions. There are persons who consider her the outstanding beauty in the radio field.

Though she loves sweets, she says she does not eat them on days when she is to sing. And she exercises, too; walks for an hour daily, swims all year—in indoor pools when the weather's cold, and fences.

She has acquired an ability for showing off good looking clothes, which she designs herself. It is recalled by some, however, that she was not always so much concerned with her personal appearance, and that her attractiveness has developed with her reputation.

She is proficient at preparing Spanish dishes, and is fond of the tasty food she cooks. She won't wear diamonds, and prefers emeralds. Despite her Spanish blood, she dislikes bright colors. There's not a red frock in her wardrobe. She speaks four languages and has never bobbed her hair. Her manner is gracious.

Dollars And Nonsense

Babe Ruth probably is able to stand a salary slice without having to give up his 12-room apartment, but maybe Mrs. Ruth would have to worry along with just two servants instead of three.

Lou Holtz, the vaudevillian, is another whose salary greivances, however just they may be, fail to stir many sympathetic tears these days.

If Holtz drew even what the Palance wants to pay him for as many weeks per year as the Babe plays ball, his income would shame the diamond star's. Yet Lou is always bothered about a few hundred dollars, more or less.

But maybe it's psychologically good for us to hear that some of the boys are able to stand up and talk back about lucre, regardless of the old bread line bogey.

Itinerant Items

Did you know that the officially defined metropolitan area of New York includes 1,159.84 square miles of New Jersey and only 49.37 square miles more than that of New York state? It also takes in a hunk of Connecticut.

Jim Londos, the wrestler, is patron saint of the Greek-American Athletic club, in the basement of a church. I get there occasionally to get a line on a boxer, whose career I am following with interest.

The place is most orderly and quiet, save for the grunts of mat behemoths. But a visitor knows instinctively that one word of criticism of Londos would throw those quarters into tumult.

GOLF

By O. B. Keeler

As usual, and for my personal part a bit more than usual, we are going to be looking hard at Gene Sarazen as the major tournament season nears. The stocky Italian has served notice again, at Agua Caliente.

Gene didn't win the biggest money tournament this time. He finished as runner-up to Fred Morrison, of Culver City, California, a 31-year-old professional playing his first big money tournament.

Fred, it appears, went crazy in the third round, after a milder attack of golfing mania in the opening session, and with cards of 69-74-68 he was in so comfortable a position that a neat 73, a stroke above par, in the last round let him out with a total of 284.

This, mind you, is four strokes better than par on a fairly tough golf course 6,838 yards around, part of the tournament (the part in which Freddy committed the 69) being played in the rain.

But consider Gene Sarazen's performance, in the light of these eccentricities of course and climate.

Gene Cleans Up

Gene led off in the rain with a 70. The rest of his cards may be read in any order you choose, because they were 72-72-72. Just good, substantial par; that's all.

Gene's ups and down, year in and year out, are drawing nearer to the deadly level of Old Man Par. He is working steadily and intelligently with his game. My tip is to watch him this year, at home and in Britain.

Gene has done very well at Caliente. In three years he has won $10,000 and $500 and $2,500, which is just $13,000 in three starts.

Nobody else ever won as much money in any three golf tournaments in this world.

Leo Diegel, home professional at Caliente, once more exemplified the odd difficulty a local professional has in winning on his own course, where, according to popular fancy, he should have a great advantage—knowing every blade of grass by its first name, and such.

Leo started out as if he meant to do this very thing. But from opening rounds of 70 and 68 he fell away to a 78 and a 76, and his score of 292 was good only for seventh place.

This score would have won the same tournament last year, with the light ball, when John Golden and George Von Elm tied for first place with 293. This time seven players went better than that pace, and the winner beat it by nine large strokes.

Cinch For Pros

But it isn't all in the .07 of an ounce added to the ball. The soggy weather caused the tournament officials to make ground rules allowing the placing of the ball in the fairways.

When you give first rate pros a cocked-up lie for a second shot to the green on a long hole, and a wet, heavy green at which to shoot—well, it's just too bad for the old course. The putting surfaces, too were greatly improved over last year.

The newest new ball seems to be gaining in favor. In the south young Charlie Yates, state and city champion of Georgia and Atlanta—the only golfer who ever won both titles in one season—was well sold on the 1931 model, with which he had done pretty well.

The other day, however, Charlie completed his fifth consecutive round at East Lake, ranging from 67 on the old course to 72 on the new, with a total score averaging two strokes better than par for each round.

"Looks to me like a very good ball," said Charles, speaking of the 1932 model.

"Choosey" People like the way they TASTE..

IT'S just what you'd expect. People who enjoy the good things of life... are constantly looking for something better to eat and drink... and smoke. Something that's out of the ordinary.

In cigarettes this better taste can come only from finer ingredients. Chesterfields are more satisfying to the cultivated palate... because there's never any attempt to skimp on Turkish leaf.

These more expensive... more richly flavored Turkish tobaccos are added with a generous hand... and 'choosey' people... everywhere... like the result.

In fact Chesterfield's new way of mingling tobacco flavors and aromas is really equivalent to creating an entirely new kind of tobacco... one that combines the best qualities of Turkish and fine Domestic leaf.

Perhaps you've noticed that the paper in Chesterfields is whiter... purer. Thousands of dollars were spent on research to perfect this paper. It burns without any taste or odor of its own. A detail, of course. But it adds immeasurably to your enjoyment.

Smoke Chesterfields whenever you like... They're mild and pure. They'll never tire you as an over-sweetened cigarette might easily do. Day in... day out... Chesterfields taste right. Light up and see for yourself. They satisfy!

Autos Side-swipe; Occupants Injured

Two victims of an automobile crash that occurred late Tuesday night on the Baltimore road between Taneytown and Emmitsburg are improving satisfactorily.

The Rosensteel car was approaching Emmitsburg while the other machine was going toward Taneytown. The fronts of the cars were demolished.

RUTH JUDD IS DECLARED SANE

Reveal Love And Jealousy Over Friend Of Trunk Murder Victims.

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 5 (AP).—Quarrels over men and the purported "strange intimacies" between Agnes Anne LeRoi and Hedvig Samuelson, trunk-murder victims, broke up the friendship between the two young women and Winnie Ruth Judd, who is on trial for the slayings, it was testified Thursday.

Dr. Joseph Catton, San Francisco psychiatrist, related to the jury conversations which he said he had with the defendant concerning her relations with the victims prior to the killings last October 16. He declared Mrs. Judd to be sane.

Mrs. Judd, the witness said, named Jack Halloran, Phoenix lumber dealer and sportsman, as a man "I love with all my heart and soul more passionately than I ever loved my husband."

Halloran, who volunteered himself as a witness, was sworn at the start of the trial with the rest of the state witnesses, but has not been called.

"Would there have been any Ruth Judd case without Halloran?" Doctor Catton said he asked Mrs. Judd.

"No," he said she answered.

"Could Halloran help you if he wanted to?" He said her answer was: "He certainly could."

Mrs. Judd, who is being tried for the slaying of Mrs. LeRoi, also was declared sane by Dr. J. R. Mauldin, Maricopa county physician. Defense witnesses previously had testified they believed Mrs. Judd was insane at the time of the slayings.

New Books

By Ware Torrey

New York.—In contrast to the "debunking" biographies of George Washington that have appeared recently, Louis Martin Sears of Purdue university has written a scholarly and fair-minded appaisal of the first president.

In "George Washington," Professor Sears studies the character of his subject from perspectives of Washington's writing, speech and actions. The book is thoroughly documented and illustrated with an unusual series of maps.

Sears believes that "it was the character of Washington which assured success to the American Revolution." Since he also holds the belief that Washington, above all others, "has left the imprint of his life upon the country he created," Professor Sears' calm and convincing analysis finds immediate application.

Defending Harding

Another phase of American history and biography is taken up in Harry M. Daugherty's defense of himself and Harding, "The Inside Story of the Harding Tagedy." This latest inside story should provoke as much comment pro and con as have other books on the subject.

Novels of the week include "The Phoenix-Kind," by Peter Quenneli, a delicately written story of two brothers; "Imagined Corners," by Willa Muir, which tells an absorbing story and deals deft character analysis of its progress; Warwick Deeping's "The Prophetic Marriage," for the first time published in America, the careful study of the development of a sensitive young man, and a canvas-full of ruddy, vital people gathered together by Jacob Wassermann in "Doctor Kerkhoven."

Echo From The War

The point of view of air raiders is graphically given in "Zeppelins Over England," by Capt. Treusch Von Buttlar Brandenfels, who was in command of the first German zeppelin to cross the English coast and who took part in many attacks on England during the war.

William Polmer, a young author in whom Hugh Walpole has detected signs of "unmistakable genius," turns his attention to a conflict of racial psychology in "They Never Come Back" and achieves a story which remains entertaining even when it borders on the bizarre.

The point of view of the Englishman resident in Japan is presented through a young English artist, an English girl who is married to a Japanese, and a Japanese youth whose deep affection for the artist comes to grief because of the conflict of eastern and western temperament.

THREE ARE SHOT IN WASHINGTON

Two Girls And A Man Are Mysteriously Shot In Capital.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Two girls were shot down Thursday night from an automobile on a street in Takoma park, Northwest Washington suburb, and shortly afterward a man was shot on a street a few miles nearer the city proper.

A woman witness to the shooting of the girls said they were walking along the street when a large black sedan approached them. It slowed down and a series of shots were fired, felling both girls. Those who heard the shots said they were close together as though fired from a machine gun.

Man Shot In Back

Gordon T. Backus, employe of the department of agriculture, was walking toward his home when a black sedan drove up behind him and one shot was fired, striking him in the back. He crawled half a block to a neighbor's home and was taken to a hospital.

The license number of the car from which the shots were fired at the girls was not obtained. Backus said the one from which he was shot bore a Maryland tag.

Can Use Defense Measures While Defending Life

Norristown, Feb. 5 (AP)—Counsel for Edward Allen, charged with the murder of Francis A. Donaldson III, told the jury in Allen's trial today that "it is the right of any individual in defense of his life to take the defensive measures necessary for that purpose."

So declared William T. Connor, counsel for Allen, who killed Donaldson with a shotgun in the Allen apartment last November.

The prosecution concluded its case shortly before noon and the defense was begun immediately.

Rose Allen, whose betrayal by Donaldson has been spread upon the court records, sat all alone today and kept her eyes mostly on the floor.

17 KILLED IN SHIP BLAST

One Man Is Missing; Believe He May Have Jumped Overboard.

Philadelphia, Feb. 5.—The death toll from the explosions and fire which wrecked the oil tanker Bidwell at its dock in Marcus Hook early Thursday mounted to seventeen after a searching party was able to penetrate the twisted mass of steel. One man is still missing and a woman and three men were seriously injured.

The bodies of twelve men, charred and mangled so badly that identification was difficult, were taken from the upper deck of the ill-fated tanker, and five were found in other parts of the ship.

The missing man is believed to have been trapped in the hold of the charred ship or to have drowned when he was hurled or leaped overboard to escape the inferno which followed the explosion.

There were four distinct blasts, and almost immediately the blackness of the night was illuminated by fingers of flame that enveloped the Bidwell and shot high into the air.

The countryside for miles around the pier at the foot of Market street, where the vessel, owned by the Sun oil company and chartered to the Sinclair oil company, had pumped out its cargo of crude oil Wednesday afternoon, was shaken by the terrific explosions.

Cause of Disaster Sought

The detonations came while shore workmen, augmenting the crew of thirty-five, were cleaning the holds. The cause has not been officially determined, but some surviving members of the crew expressed the belief a spark of flame came in contact with a gas pocket. Coroner Scheeble, of Delaware county, and officials of the Sun oil company questioned the members of the crew in an effort to learn the cause of the disaster.

New Jersey Governor Indorses Hoover Request to End Hoarding

Trenton, Feb. 5—President Hoover's request to cease hoarding of money was approved by Governor Moore, who has received numerous letters from bankers urging that all money be placed in circulation.

"People should remove their money immediately from safe-deposit boxes, under beds, in clocks and other similar places of concealment," said the governor.

As a preliminary to an introduction of bills designed to effect economies in New Jersey state government by abolishing useless or needless commissions, the governor requested Attorney General Stevens to prepare a detailed list of all commissions in the state.

As a part of his economy program the governor has recommended that such bodies be abolished.

Colonel Thomas E. Fitzsimmons, judge advocate of the forty-fourth division, urged upon Governor Moore an amendment to the constitution to provide that line officers of military units, which include captains and lieutenants, be appointed by the governor instead of election by the enlisted personnel. The proposal has the approval of General Quincy A. Gillmore and has no political significance, it was said.

Among the agencies listed for discard are the state traffic commission, the commission to mark historic sites, South Jersey Transit commission, tax survey commission, state regional planning commission, commission on migratory children, small loans commission, New Jersey real estate commission, migrant welfare commission, commission on old age and insurance pensions and the state board of regents.

Governor Moore proposes that the functions of those commissions doing a necessary work shall be transferred to some established department with a consequent saving of appropriations.

BULLETS LOSE TO PRINCETON

Meet Drexel Quint In League Encounter At Philadelphia Tonight.

Gettysburg college's Bullet dribblers lost its second tilt of the 1932 campaign, Thursday night, when they bowed before the fast stepping Princeton quintet, on the latter's court, 46 to 32. It was the second defeat in six starts for the Men-of-Bream, but the defeat has no bearing on the Central Pennsylvania Collegiate basketball standing. Princeton is not a member of the league.

Siebert was high scorer of the evening with fourteen points. Captain Seely and Dracha were tied for scoring honors for the Bullets, each registering nine tallies.

Tonight the Bullets face the Drexel aggregation in their second and last clash this season at Philadelphia. If the Bullets lose tonight's tilt they will be tied for first place standing in the league with Franklin and Marshall. A victory tonight will give the Orange and Blue defenders a whacking good lead of four victories and no defeats.

Next Wednesday Dickinson comes here for the first of a two-game series with the Bullets.

PHOENIXVILLE HERE SATURDAY

"Skeets" Anglemoyer, Former G-burg Star, On Visiting Team Quintet.

A fast game is promised Saturday night when the Fleet-Wing quintet plays a return game with the Phoenixville Pros on the hotel floor. The Wings eked out a narrow 47-42 win over this club last Wednesday but expect stiffer opposition in the coming game.

Phoenixville is reported to be enlisting several new players to bolster their lineup and are confident of victory.

Prominent in the visitors' lineup are "Skeets" Anglemoyer, guard on the college team last year, and "Lefty" Magyar, one-armed star of Phoenixville. With a revamped lineup the Pros are expected to give the locals considerable trouble.

Highway vs. York Springs

As a preliminary the state highway quintet will play the strong York Springs independents. This game will get under way at 7 o'clock.

Hoak's Dairy five, who earlier in the season refused to meet the Wings, claiming they were "not good enough," will be played here Monday night.

Statistics reval that in winning twelve of their fifteen games, the locals have rolled up a total of 539 points for an average of 35.9 points per game. The opposition has tallied 406 points, averaging 27.1 tallies a game.

Boston, Feb. 5 (AP)—Six members of the crew of the schooner Eleanor Nickerson were picked up by the steamer Jean Jadot and 21 were missing after a collision 350 miles west of Halifax, the coast guard reported today.

The Jadot sent word that she had been in collision with the Nickerson and after picking up the six men it was searching for the 21 others.

Countians Oppose Sino-Jap War Aid

Congressman Harry L. Haines of the York-Adams district has been sent a communication signed by the two pastors and more than two hundred members of the Reformed and Trinity Lutheran churches at Arendtsville suggesting a national policy with reference to the Chinese-Japanese outbreak.

The document declares "War is the enemy of all that is good and therefore contrary to the will of God."

It is recommended that all loans to Japan be prohibited and if it is not established that Japan is the aggressor in the trouble that loans to China be stopped also; that an embargo be placed on all materials of war; that an economic embargo be instituted as soon as practicable; that citizens of the United States leave the war-stricken area, thereby removing a great cause of interference on the part of our military forces.

The name of the Rev. Ernest W. Brindle heads the signers of the Reformed congregation and that of the Rev. George B. Ely the signers of the Lutheran congregation.

Read The Bible With Us Daily

Make a joyful noise unto God, all ye lands:

Sing forth the honour of his name: make his praise glorious.

Say unto God, How terrible art thou in thy works! through the greatness of thy power shall thine enemies submit themselves unto thee.

All the earth shall worship thee, and shall sing unto thee; they shall sing to thy name. Selah.

Come and see the work of God: he is terrible in his doing toward the children of men.

He turned the sea into dry land: they went through the flood on foot: there did we rejoice in him.

He ruleth by his power for ever; his eyes behold the nations: let not the rebellious exalt themselves. Selah.

O bless our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard:

Which holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved.

For thou, O God, hast proved us: thou hast tried us, as silver is tried.

Thou broughtest us into the net; thou laidst affliction upon our loins.

Thou hast caused men to ride over our heads; we went through fire and through water: but thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place.

I will go into thy house with burnt offerings: I will pay thee my vows.

Which my lips have uttered, and my mouth hath spoken, when I was in trouble.

I will offer unto thee burnt sacrifices of fatlings, with the incense of rams: I will offer bullocks with goats. Selah.

Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul.

I cried unto him with my mouth, and he extolled with my tongue.

If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me:

But verily God hath heard me; he hath attended to the voice of my prayer.

Blessed be God, which hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.

Psalm 66.

Counties Sponsor Spring Field Day

A recent study made by the department of public instruction shows that thirty-one counties sponsor a spring field day. These field days are under the supervision of the county superintendent and his staff. The competition offered is largely of an athletic nature, although many counties have competition in scholastic events as well. Preliminary contests are held in many of the school districts to determine who shall represent the district at the field day.

The athletic events include the short dashes, longer runs, various types of jumping, chinning the bar, baseball and basketball throwing for accuracy and distance, and relay races. Special events include marble tournaments, athletic badge tests, boy scout tests, maypole dances and group games.

Scholastic competition includes spelling, English, declamation, geography, history, arithmetic, algebra, penmanship story telling, art, Latin, vocal and instrumental music, commercial subjects and vocational subjects.

Approximately 55,000 pupils take part in the preliminary tryouts and about 18,000 represent their schools in the county finals. Attempts are being made in a number of counties to revise the program to include an even greater number of pupils.

HISTORY OF ADAMS COUNTY

A Chronological Review Of Things That Have Gone Before, And The Trials And Tribulations Of Our Ancestors, As Published Serially For The Benefit Of Gettysburg Times' Readers.

Franklin County Churches

The Reformed and Lutheran Union church, known as "Flohr's," dates back to 1822, when the two societies entered on the work of erecting a house of worship. In 1875 the Reformed society which owned an interest in "Flohr's" church with the Lutherans, up to that time, purchased the latter's interest for $400, and the Lutherans bought the lot on which the church stood for $25, and on which the present Lutheran church now stands, near McKnightstown, this township. Some of the original documents belonging to this society were destroyed in the rebel invasion of 1863, hence the date of organization and names of original members are unknown. The date of the building of the first church is also unknown. The second church was built of brick where the present one now stands. It was dedicated in 1822, and used as already stated, by the Reformed and Lutheran denominations until 1875. The present church was erected in 1875-76 and dedicated in the latter year. Its present membership is 200, and value of property is $7,000. The names of pastors are Revs. John Herbst, Charles Weyle, Frederick Ruthrauff, Benjamin Keller, George Roth, L. J. Bell, J. K. Miller, Michael Snyder, H. F. Long and D. M. Blackwelder.

On the north side of the road opposite Flohr's church, stood the old Mennonite meeting-house, in which the followers of Menno Simonis worshiped until 1823 when a church was erected at Mummasburg. A schoolhouse occupies the site of the old church; but opposite is the ancient cemetery of the original congregation, still claiming memorials of many of its early tenants.

Arendtsville

The site of Arendtsville or "John's Pursuit," was warranted to Nicholas Curle January 9, 1739, and patented by John Arendt August 14, 1810. In 1803 one William Sterling, of Gettysburg, conveyed forty acres (of the Curle seventy-three acres) for 5 s., just across the Menallen line, where the blockhouse of 1855 stood. Arendtsville was founded in 1808 by John Arendt, who died in 1826.

In 1820 Myers kept the weather-boarded hotel, where George G. Plank's dwelling now stands. The "Hiram Trostle House" was also there, used as a tavern. John Arendt built the house at the corner of the square now owned by Mr. Malaun, and a blacksmith shop, where now are the hotel stables. In 1845 Lower opened a store where now is ths Trostle building; in 1848 he built a carpenter shop on the Mrs. A. Taylor property; in 1852 George Lower erected a stone building on the lot adjoining. In 1845 Jacob Keckler was postmaster; Emanuel Umstadt established the first tannery.

Churches

Trinity Lutheran church.—The date of the organization of this society is about 1781, and the date of the church buildings are respectively 1787, 1851 and 1882. The first was of logs, located in the present old grave-yard. The second was of brick, and stood where the present improved Reformed church now it. The first and second churches were used jointly by the Reformed and Lutheran denominations until the summer of 1882. The present church is located beside the Lutheran parsonage on High street, in Arendtsville. It is built of brick, two stories, with steeple and bell. Its present membership numbers 321, and the value of property, inclusive of parsonage, is $10,000. The following are the names of the pastors who have served this congregation: Revs. Meltzheimer, Heiney, John Herbst, Charles Weyle, Frederick Ruthrauff, Benjamin Keller, A. R. Height, George Roth, L. J. Bell, J. K. Miller, Michael Snyder, H. F. Long and D. M. Blackwelder.

In 1781 a grant of two acres and twenty-seven perches of land was made by Jacob Arendt and Stophel Sentmire, to Frederick Stanour and Philip Hartzell for the use of the Lutheran and Reformed churches. This lot adjoins "John's Jursuit"; on this a house of worship was erected on the southeast corner of the square, opposite the present Reformed church, in 1857—a two-story, log, weatherboarded structure. The pulpit was barrel shaped and the altar was railed in. The school and sexton's house, at the end, were built at the same time. In 1851 these old buildings were removed, and the foundations for a new church laid on the site of the school and sexton's house. This was known as Zion Reformed and Lutheran church. With its building the parish school disappeared. In 1785 the first record book was purchased. The first to be baptized, were John, Jacob and Anna Catherine Schneider, March 26, 1786. The oldest communion list is dated May 9 and 23, 1790. The first burial in the old grave-yard was in 1790, when Anna Maria Berrin was interred. In 1872 Green Mount and Fairview cemeteries were established.

DIETS FOR ADOLESCENTS—I

What do the adolescent boy and girl require in their diet?

The self-evident answer is those foods which will contribute most to his or her full growth and development.

Meat is good food for a growing body and should be included in the adolescent's diet to the extent of from two to four ounces daily. To make a sufficiency of proteins available, cheese, and the protein-rich legumes, peas, beans, lentils, may be added.

Milk is also a most valuable food for the growing youth, and should be served liberally. In this connection, bear in mind that milk may be served as cocoa, or chocolate, and can be included in a wide variety of soups.

Cereals and breads supply a fairly inexpensive source of energy for the active youngster and should be included in the breakfast. When fruits, raisins, dates, or nuts are added to the cereals, an otherwise unappealing dish can be made palatable and welcome.

Fruits and green vegetables supply the adolescent with essential mineral salts and vitamins.

Usually fruits are eagerly consumed, and the young should not be stinted in or with these articles of diet, which some still regard in the nature of luxuries, instead of necessities.

Sweets should be allowed in moderation, and only after meals. Strong condiments and spices, often craved by a finicky appetite, should be discouraged.

In estimating the calorie content of the adolescent's diet one should allow between the ages of 12 to 13 of from 27 to 34 calories per day, per each pound of body weight.

Between 14 and 17 the calories per day per pound weight is somewhat lower, namely from 22 to 30.

In distributing the composition of the diet between proteins, fats and starches, the proteins should be sufficiently represented to allow at least three calories for each pound of body weight.

Tomorrow—Diets for Adolescents—II

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ACHIEVEMENT

ACHIEVEMENT is so often measured. It can neither be measured nor weighed. It has to be felt. And often this intermediate waiting is most discouraging—for, when all is said and done, men and women strive for fruits of achievement, which are appreciation, satisfaction in one's own heart, and the pure pleasure that honest achievement always brings.

Often the germs of genius remain planted in the deep heart, for years and years. Then the conception of some great beauty, some great movement, some high resolve appears—effort and will are warmed to white heat—and the thing desired and dreamed about, gushes into life—and often into immortality!

And the thing most despised or undervalued by ourselves, often rises in its worth as the most living thing of our creation.

I found a little sentence somewhere many years ago and filed it away in my mind. Here it is: "Make no small plans. They have no magic to stir the imagination!" A most stupendous gathering movement must be initiated within our hearts, would we greatly and worthily achieve!

Record harvests usually follow the long periods of draught. We should try and be brave and not become restless under the strain of non-production. We should remember the seeds we guard, buried within our conscious life. They will be happy days indeed "when the groves begin to bear."

Time speeds;
But art unfolds
In feeding movements
Knowing only Growth—
'Til birth!

The most lasting and living achievements that their creators have brought about, have often been those considered least great. That is usually the reason why they were great. Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, Gissing's beautiful "Ryecraft Papers," Michael Fairless's "Roadmender" and Forain's etching "The Prodigal Son." Instances of what, at the time, appeared but feeble efforts—but now immortal inspirations!

A Plan for Better "Control-of-Colds" Perfected by Vicks

Greensboro, N. C.—A Plan for better "Control-of-Colds" has been developed by the makers of Vicks VapoRub—the modern, external way of "treating" colds. The Plan is made possible by the Vicks Nose & Throat Drops, based on a new idea for "preventing" colds. Get a bottle of Vicks Drops now and use with VapoRub as directed in the Vick Plan—to lessen the number and severity of colds and reduce your family "Colds-Tax" this winter.

How to Get Rid of RHEUMATISM

New Medicine Drives Rheumatic Poisons from Joints—Muscles. EASES PAIN FIRST DAY

Poisons settling in the joints and muscles cause rheumatism. You cannot get rid of rheumatic agony till these dangerous poisons are driven out of your system. External remedies and pain deadening drugs only give temporary relief.

What you need is RU-MA, the new medicine now sold by druggists everywhere, that acts directly on the liver, kidneys and blood, and helps expel through the natural channels of elimination the dangerous poisons that cause rheumatism.

No long waiting for your suffering to stop. RU-MA eases pain the first day and is the one rheumatic remedy guaranteed by People's Drug Store to free muscles and joints from all painful stiffness and swelling and stop your rheumatic suffering or your money back.

REVALUATION

Let us be sensible; let us be men!
Yesterday never is coming again.
Whatever the future for us has in store,
It will be different from what's gone before.
The old days are over, the new days are here.
And property's worth what it sells for this year.

Let's be courageous and let's face the truth.
Men in their fifties no longer have youth.
To sigh for lost pleasures and customs is vain;
Old dogs can never be puppies again.
We may wish for the past till our faces turn back,
But the thing that was yesterday never comes back!

We have known laughter and sunshine, but now
We must brave tempest and trial somehow.
Once life seemed pleasant, but now it is stern.
A new set of values today we must learn.
A new code of courage, a rough weather creed,
And faith in tomorrow are things that we need.

Gargle Aspirin for Tonsilitis or Sore Throat

A harmless and effective gargle may be prepared by dissolving three to five Bayer Aspirin tablets in one-third glassful of water. Gargle thoroughly, allowing a little to trickle down throat. Repeat in two hours as necessary.

Be sure you use only the genuine Bayer Aspirin, marked with the Bayer cross; beware of substitutes.

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs.

At fifty, you can be in your prime.

Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years?

There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways.

This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin protects the system. All druggists keep this preparation.

Use this right method to reduce. Aim to stop the fat formation, then aid Nature to remove it. Ask your druggist for Marmola. Read the book in the box to know how and why it acts. Stop when your weight returns to normal and your vim comes back. Don't keep this blight and burden. Start Marmola now.

Read The Bible With Us Daily

Make a joyful noise unto God, all ye lands:

Sing forth the honour of his name: make his praise glorious.

Say unto God, How terrible art thou in thy works! through the greatness of thy power shall thine enemies submit themselves unto thee.

All the earth shall worship thee, and shall sing unto thee; they shall sing to thy name. Selah.

Come and see the work of God: he is terrible in his doing toward the children of men.

He turned the sea into dry land: they went through the flood on foot: there did we rejoice in him.

He ruleth by his power for ever; his eyes behold the nations: let not the rebellious exalt themselves. Selah.

O bless our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard:

Which holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved.

For thou, O God, hast proved us: thou hast tried us, as silver is tried.

Thou broughtest us into the net; thou laidst affliction upon our loins.

Thou hast caused men to ride over our heads: we went through fire and through water: but thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place.

I will go into thy house with burnt offerings: I will pay thee my vows.

Which my lips have uttered, and my mouth hath spoken, when I was in trouble.

I will offer unto thee burnt sacrifices of fatlings, with the incense of rams: I will offer bullocks with goats. Selah.

Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul.

I cried unto him with my mouth, and he extolled with my tongue.

If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me:

But verily God hath heard me; he hath attended to the voice of my prayer.

Blessed be God, which hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.

Psalm 66.

Counties Sponsor Spring Field Day

A recent study made by the department of public instruction shows that thirty-one counties sponsor a spring field day. These field days are under the supervision of the county superintendent and his staff. The competition offered is largely of an athletic nature, although many counties have competition in scholastic events as well. Preliminary contests are held in many of the school districts to determine who shall represent the district at the field day.

The athletic events include the short dashes, longer runs, various types of jumping, chinning the bar, baseball and basketball throwing for accuracy and distance, and relay races. Special events include marble tournaments, athletic badge tests, boy scout tests, maypole dances and group games.

Scholastic competition includes spelling, English, declamation, geography, history, arithmetic, algebra, penmanship story telling, art, Latin, vocal and instrumental music, commercial subjects and vocational subjects.

Approximately 55,000 pupils take part in the preliminary tryouts and about 18,000 represent their schools in the county finals. Attempts are being made in a number of counties to revise the program to include an even greater number of pupils.

Franklin County Churches

The Reformed and Lutheran Union church, known as "Flohr's," dates back to 1822, when the two societies entered on the work of erecting a house of worship. In 1875 the Reformed society which owned an interest in "Flohr's" church with the Lutherans, up to that time, purchased the latter's interest for $400, and the Lutherans bought the lot on which the church stood for $25, and on which the present Lutheran church now stands, near McKnightstown, this township. Some of the original documents belonging to this society were destroyed in the rebel invasion of 1863, hence the date of organization and names of original members are unknown. The date of the building of the first church is also unknown. The second church was built of brick where the present one now stands. It was dedicated in 1822, and used as already stated, by the Reformed and Lutheran denominations until 1875. The present church was erected in 1875-76 and dedicated in the latter year. Its present membership is 200, and value of property is $7,000. The names of pastors are Revs. John Herbst, Charles Weyle, Frederick Ruthrauff, Benjamin Keller, George Roth, L. J. Bell, J. K. Miller, Michael Snyder, H. F. Long and D. M. Blackwelder.

On the north side of the road opposite Flohr's church, stood the old Mennonite meeting-house, in which the followers of Menno Simonis worshiped until 1823 when a church was erected at Mummasburg. A schoolhouse occupies the site of the old church; but opposite is the ancient cemetery of the original congregation, still claiming memorials of many of its early tenants.

Arendtsville

The site of Arendtsville or "John's Pursuit," was warranted to Nicholas Curle January 9, 1739, and patented by John Arendt August 14, 1810. In 1803 one William Sterling, of Gettysburg, conveyed forty acres (of the Curle seventy-three acres) for 5 s., just across the Menallen line, where the blockhouse of 1855 stood. Arendtsville was founded in 1808 by John Arendt, who died in 1826.

In 1820 Myers kept the weather-boarded hotel, where George G. Plank's dwelling now stands. The "Hiram Trostle House" was also there, used as a tavern. John Arendt built the house at the corner of the square now owned by Mr. Malaun, and a blacksmith shop, where now are the hotel stables. In 1845 Lower opened a store where now is ths Trostle building; in 1848 he built a carpenter shop on the Mrs. A. Taylor property; in 1852 George Lower erected a stone building on the lot adjoining. In 1845 Jacob Keckler was postmaster; Emanuel Umstadt established the first tannery.

Churches

Trinity Lutheran church.—The date of the organization of this society is about 1781, and the date of the church buildings are respectively 1787, 1851 and 1882. The first was of logs, located in the present old grave-yard. The second was of brick, and stood where the present improved Reformed church now it. The first and second churches were used jointly by the Reformed and Lutheran denominations until the summer of 1882. The present church is located beside the Lutheran parsonage on High street, in Arendtsville. It is built of brick, two stories, with steeple and bell. Its present membership numbers 321, and the value of property, inclusive of parsonage, is $10,000. The following are the names of the pastors who have served this congregation: Revs. Meltzheimer, Heiney, John Herbst, Charles Weyle, Frederick Ruthrauff, Benjamin Keller, A. R. Height, George Roth, L. J. Bell, J. K. Miller, Michael Snyder, H. F. Long and D. M. Blackwelder.

In 1781 a grant of two acres and twenty-seven perches of land was made by Jacob Arendt and Stophel Sentmire, to Frederick Stanour and Philip Hartzell for the use of the Lutheran and Reformed churches. This lot adjoins "John's Jursuit"; on this a house of worship was erected on the southeast corner of the square, opposite the present Reformed church, in 1857—a two-story, log, weatherboarded structure. The pulpit was barrel shaped and the altar was railed in. The school and sexton's house, at the end, were built at the same time. In 1851 these old buildings were removed, and the foundations for a new church laid on the site of the school and sexton's house. This was known as Zion Reformed and Lutheran church. With its building the parish school disappeared. In 1785 the first record book was purchased. The first to be baptized, were John, Jacob and Anna Catherine Schneider, March 26, 1786. The oldest communion list is dated May 9 and 23, 1790. The first burial in the old grave-yard was in 1790, when Anna Maria Berrin was interred. In 1872 Green Mount and Fairview cemeteries were established.

DIETS FOR ADOLESCENTS—I

The self-evident answer is those foods which will contribute most to his or her full growth and development.

Meat is good food for a growing body and should be included in the adolescent's diet to the extent of from two to four ounces daily. To make a sufficiency of proteins available, cheese, and the protein-rich legumes, peas, beans, lentils, may be added.

Milk is also a most valuable food for the growing youth, and should be served liberally. In this connection, bear in mind that milk may be served as cocoa, or chocolate, and can be included in a wide variety of soups.

Cereals and breads supply a fairly inexpensive source of energy for the active youngster and should be included in the breakfast. When fruits, raisins, dates, or nuts are added to the cereals, an otherwise unappealing dish can be made palatable and welcome.

Fruits and green vegetables supply the adolescent with essential mineral salts and vitamins.

Usually fruits are eagerly consumed, and the young should not be stinted in or with these articles of diet, which some still regard in the nature of luxuries, instead of necessities.

Sweets should be allowed in moderation, and only after meals. Strong condiments and spices, often craved by a finicky appetite, should be discouraged.

In estimating the calorie content of the adolescent's diet one should allow between the ages of 12 to 13 of from 27 to 34 calories per day, per each pound of body weight.

Between 14 and 17 the calories per day per pound weight is somewhat lower, namely from 22 to 30.

In distributing the composition of the diet between proteins, fats and starches, the proteins should be sufficiently represented to allow at least three calories for each pound of body weight.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ACHIEVEMENT

ACHIEVEMENT is so often measured. It can neither be measured nor weighed. It has to be felt. And often this intermediate waiting is most discouraging—for, when all is said and done, men and women strive for fruits of achievement, which are appreciation, satisfaction in one's own heart, and the pure pleasure that honest achievement always brings.

Often the germs of genius remain planted in the deep heart, for years and years. Then the conception of some great beauty, some great movement, some high resolve appears—effort and will are warmed to white heat—and the thing desired and dreamed about, gushes into life—and often into immortality!

And the thing most despised or undervalued by ourselves, often rises in its worth as the most living thing of our creation.

I found a little sentence somewhere many years ago and filed it away in my mind. Here it is: "Make no small plans. They have no magic to stir the imagination!" A most stupendous gathering movement must be initiated within our hearts, would we greatly and worthily achieve!

Record harvests usually follow the long periods of draught. We should try and be brave and not become restless under the strain of non-production. We should remember the seeds we guard, buried within our conscious life. They will be happy days indeed "when the groves begin to bear."

Time speeds;
But art unfolds
In feeding movements
Knowing only Growth—
'Til birth!

The most lasting and living achievements that their creators have brought about, have often been those considered least great. That is usually the reason why they were great. Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, Gissing's beautiful "Ryecraft Papers," Michael Fairless's "Roadmender" and Forain's etching "The Prodigal Son." Instances of what, at the time, appeared but feeble efforts—but now immortal inspirations!

REVALUATION

Let us be sensible; let us be men!
Yesterday never is coming again.
Whatever the future for us has in store,
It will be different from what's gone before.
The old days are over, the new days are here.
And property's worth what it sells for this year.

Let's be courageous and let's face the truth.
Men in their fifties no longer have youth.
To sigh for lost pleasures and customs is vain;
Old dogs can never be puppies again.
We may wish for the past till our faces turn back,
But the thing that was yesterday never comes back!

We have known laughter and sunshine, but now
We must brave tempest and trial somehow.
Once life seemed pleasant, but now it is stern.
A new set of values today we must learn.
A new code of courage, a rough weather creed,
And faith in tomorrow are things that we need.

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs.

At fifty, you can be in your prime.

Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years?

There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways.

This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin protects the system. All druggists keep this preparation.
